Is it unjust for a company to share a large sector of a market? This is one of the questions before the United States Department of Justice right now concerning Microsoft and the software market. If Microsoft does a good job at what it does, then undoubtedly it will gain a large share of the market just like it has. Its time to end this attack fueled by petty jealousies of other software competitors and our federal government's fear of letting individuals do their own business. Let Microsoft be and let the market dictate who comes out on top.

One of the many citizens who this country belongs to rightfully,
